Visual Depiction of AI in the US in 2022

We are lucky enough to have a GIS specialist on our GPLN team. Her name is Nicki Smith, and many of you on the live production side have likely conversed regarding farm location information. This poster is the result of a project Nicki did for AAAP this year. We had multiple requests for prints of this poster while at AAAP, and we wanted to open up a pre-order in case others want a print of this poster as well. It is approximately 4ft by 3ft. We will take orders through December 8th. Please email CustomerService@gapoultrylab.org if you are interested in ordering a print.

Dr. Davis has a 35 year legacy at the lab, which was honored at our annual meeting. Thank you for spending 35 years with GPLN sharing your knowledge with us and many in the industry and beyond! Your mark on the industry is one to admire.

Dr. Waltman's career at GPLN began 35 years ago, which was honored at our annual meeting amongst many in the industry he has undoubtedly assisted through the years with his world-renowned knowledge of Salmonella. Thank you for your 35 years of service!

LEFT: The German Agricultural Exchange visited the lab along with Mike Giles of the Georgia Poultry Federation. We enjoyed discussing aspects of the industry in Georgia versus Germany.

David Bleth, former GPLN chairman, presented our incumbent chairman, Phillip Turner, with our Chairman Appreciation Award. Thank you both for your time spent serving our lab!

Poultry World

LEFT: The Tyson Camilla team were volunteers at Poultry World during the Georgia National Fair in Perry along with one of our own, Bethany Coggin. Thank you to Tyson and the industry partners who make time to help at Poultry World. You are the heartbeat of it, which allows consumers to know real people care about these chickens and producing quality food.
